

What's hot

Bags

IT'S the store you have when you're not having a store.

It's Florence Broadhurst's "pop-up" store that will only be in Brisbane until December 21 at 67 James St, Fortitude Valley.

Broadhurst was an Australian who revolutionised wallpaper and textile design in the 1970s.

Now a range of her prints will be available in Brisbane for a limited time on handbags, cushions and throw rugs.

Forget the sneaky touch-up – you'll be the centre of attention when you slick on a coat of "Wow Pink". It's a party in your purse with 52 hours of disco action available from David Jones for a limited time only.

Lipstick

WE PUT a man on the moon so it was only a matter of time before we put a mirrorball inside a lipgloss.

Well not quite, but Model Co have done the next best thing by putting flashing lights inside the wand of their latest lipsmacker, Disco Lights.

Sponges

IT WAS one of Oprah's favourite things (and no, we're not talking about Hugh Jackman).

These decadent little sponges are bursting with exotic fragrances that can last up to 35 washes. Prices start at $9.95. Check them out at www.sponge.com.au

Perfume

THE name's No. 89 – Floris No. 89 – and it was Ian Fleming's favourite scent. Fleming, of course, created James Bond, so to coincide with the release of the latest flick, Fleming's signature fragrance has arrived in Australia.

It's a mix of orange and bergamot blended with lavender and neroli, along with spicy nutmeg and sandalwood.

T-shirts

THE internet is buzzing with praise for Brisbane designer James Lillis who's re-worked a T-shirt using a popular image used by Obama supporters during the US election campaign.

It features The Joker as played by Heath Ledger and it's proving a hit in the US for about $27.

Gumboots

THOSE summer music festivals aren't far away, so give your feet a fighting chance and pick up a pair of sludge-resistant gumboots.

Rosie Roo Designer Wellies won't let you go unnoticed amid the human bumblebees and crazy hats during the next festival in a paddock near you. For stockists, check out:
